

L.A. PHILANTHROPIST CYNTHIA STAFFORD INVITES LOCAL TITLE 1 STUDENTS TO "GIFTED DAY AT THE GEFFEN"

Special Guest City Controller Wendy Greuel Joins Q&A with Students
Monday, April 16, 2012

LOS ANGELES, April 9, 2012 – Philanthropist and Geffen Playhouse Board Member Cynthia Stafford is once again joining forces with the Partnership for Los Angeles Schools and the Geffen Playhouse to host the second annual Gifted Day at the Geffen. After winning the California lottery in 2007, Ms. Stafford became one of Los Angeles' most well-known philanthropists, lending dedicated support to the Geffen Playhouse education and outreach programs. This annual event, which invites honors students from underserved area schools to enjoy a day of theater education, is one of Ms. Stafford's unique contributions to arts education. Cynthia Stafford's Gifted Day at the Geffen includes a pre-show workshop, transportation to and from the theater, a matinee performance, lunch and a post-show Q&A with the cast and special guests including L.A. City Controller Wendy Greuel.

"I believe that education is vital to whatever it is you want to do or become in life, and that the arts open minds to the creative possibilities that exist, thereby developing a well rounded individual and society," said Cynthia Stafford. "Today we are combining those two very important things by introducing exceptional students – those who excel in spite of their surroundings, circumstances and situations – to arts education."

This year, 240 students from Samuel Gompers Middle School and Robert Louis Stevenson Middle School will pack the Geffen on Monday, April 16 for a main stage performance of Rock the Presidents, a high-energy rock musical presented by nationally recognized youth theater company Childsplay. Described in USA Today as "a blast of guitar-crunching, fist-pumping, lighter-flicking awesomeness," Rock the Presidents features stories spanning the 223 years of the American presidency and is brought to life by an all-original rock, pop and folk music soundtrack.

After the show, students will have the opportunity to dig deeper with a Q&A session with the cast of Rock the Presidents, Cynthia Stafford, her husband, film and television producer Lanré Idewu, as well as local political expert Wendy Greuel. The panel discussion will be moderated by Geffen Playhouse Artistic Director Randall Arney.

Prior to the event, Geffen teaching artists will visit the participating schools and give a pre-show workshop, encouraging students to get involved in the political theme of the production by writing campaign speeches that include one dream they have for the future of the United States and three promises they would make to their constituents if they were to run for office. Then, Stafford and the Geffen's education department will select one speech to be read aloud and shared with the entire audience.

In addition to "Gifted Day at the Geffen," Rock the Presidents is performing as a part of the Geffen Playhouse Saturday Scene on April 14, and with the help of the Geffen education and outreach team, the musical will also visit (free-of-charge) 10 Title I public schools during its stay in the L.A. area.
